MARK THE CLIMAX OF THE SOCIAL SEASON

MRS. JAMES B. CLEWS

NEW YORK society in recent years has not known a week as remarkable as the last, the days of Infanta Eulalie and Prince Henry of Prussia to the contrary notwithstanding. Those who recall the details of the reception given to the Spanish princess in the assembly rooms of the Madison Square Garden and the various dinners and the gala performance at the Metropolitan for the brother of the Emperor of Germany, just a decade ago, do not hesitate to give precedence to the series of brilliant soirees and luncheons for the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, beginning on Monday night at the home of the Ambassador to Great Britain and Mrs. Reid, over the events ten and nearly twenty years ago.

"We are still young in New York," said one who served on the reception committee when the Infanta Eulalie was here, and who met Prince Henry at one of the few private entertainments given for him. "There was a time when our heads were turned by the presence of royalty. Witness the events when Eulalie was here, when engagements were broken so that the acquaintance of the Spanish princess could be made. We have learned a great deal through experience and have acquired stability, upon which New York society as a whole should be congratulated. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught would have been greatly distressed if they had known that even one person had broken a previous engagement for the purpose of being presented to them, and the fact that a number of persons sent regrets proves not only a loyalty to friends but a wealth of good common sense that is merely the evidence of genuine culture."

THE Duke, Duchess and Princess have gone back to Canada, leaving behind impressions of charming personalities about whom for four days there centered entertainments simple yet elegant in character, attended by men and women of consequence in private and public life. Princess Patricia also left behind an impression that will long be retained, particularly by the young men. It is that she is one of the best conversationalists they ever met and also one of the best dancers. That the Princess is fond of dancing was made evident at the ball that followed the dinner and musicale at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reid on Tuesday night. She danced successfully with twelve young men and seemed to be ready for more dances when it came time for the visitors to retire to their apartments.

Those who attended the dinners on Monday and Tuesday nights were impressed by the simplicity of the arrangements. The visitors did not dine at tables apart from the other guests. The Duke, on Monday evening, was at a table with Mrs. Reid, and the Duchess at another with Mr. Reid. There were eight at each table. The Princess' dinner companions were all young people. Each evening the guests assembled in the drawing room and the royal party upon coming down found the others conversing in small groups. The Duke, with Mrs. Reid, and the Duchess, with Mr. Reid, went from group to group, the visitors being presented to each guest and having a few words with each one.

THE manner in which the guests met the Princess was even less formal. It was not until the interval before the dancing that followed the music that Princess Patricia met the young men with whom she later danced. There was no designation of dancing partners. The etiquette was that of a small informal dance. Some of the men who had the pleasure of dancing with the Princess were Messrs. T. Jefferson Newbold, William Stephen Van Rensselaer, Ogden Mills Reid, Charles Draper, Worthington Whitehouse, Robert Bacon and Devereux Milburn. On Monday and Tuesday evenings the Duke, Duchess and Princess retired to their rooms shortly after midnight.

On Wednesday at the dinner and musicale given for them by Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills all the guests, aside from those in the royal party, arrived in advance, and were in waiting when the Ambassador and his party arrived. Several of those who had dined with Mr. and Mrs. Reid on the two preceding evenings were again with Mr. and Mrs. Mills, and in many instances the formalities of presentations were dispensed with. This tended to increase the sense of informality. An effort was made to have different parties at each of the three dinners, but this was found to be impossible because of previous engagements.

THE Duke met several persons whose presence recalled his visit to New York when a young man, and among them was, in addition to Mr. W. Butler Duncan, who saw to the details of his first visit, Mrs. F. Grand d'Hauteville. As Miss McComb Mrs. d'Hauteville was one of the few young women of the time with whom the Prince danced.

BACK of the events of the week beginning with Sunday evening there has been a constant concord of sweet sounds, of dramatic art and even of comedy. Miss Johanna Gadsby, Mme. Maurice Maeterlinck, Miss Ada Sassoli, Mons. Edmond Clement, Mr. Efram Zimbalist, Mr. Dimitri Smirnov, Mme. Louise Homer, Mr. Riccardo Martin, Mme. Alma Gluck, Mr. Pasquale Amato and Mr. Arthur Rosensteel were among the artists who furnished most of the sweet sounds, while Mme. Simone, Mr. Arnold Daly and Mr. Norman Tharp contributed dramatic art.

It was at the home of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., on Sunday evening, that the last three figures in the social developments of an unusual week in society. Mme. Simone, Mr. Daly and Mr. Tharp appeared in a one act play entitled "Bryant, 5800," adapted by Mr. Gaston Mayer from the French of Tristan Bernard's "Les Coteaux du Medoc."

The programmes were in themselves interesting souvenirs of the evening. They were printed in blue on large sheets, and on the cover the artist pictured the hostess at the telephone telling her friends of what was in prospect, while her pet dog, Diavolo, looked on, ears erect, the picture of inquisitiveness.

The dinner that preceded the play was served at two tables, the decorations being of orchids. A stage had been erected at one end of the ballroom and special scenery had been painted for the production of the play.

FIRST P. P. C. cards have gone, there will be numerous departures for the South, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis James leaving for Florida within a week. Nevertheless, society's engagement book shows a number of important events yet to come before Lent opens, during the third week of February. Mrs. French Vanderbilt will give a large dinner dance to-morrow evening at Sherry's. There will be several dinners before all the guests meet for the dance, and among them will be one for twenty-two guests given by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Tharp to-morrow night also Mr. and Mrs. William Church Osborn will give a new house at Fifth avenue and Eighty-fifth street.

Mrs. Westervelt gave a small tea last week at her home for Lady Henry, wife of the London philanthropist, Sir Charles Henry, M. P.

Mrs. Ralph Sanger has selected an appropriate name for the benefit she is arranging in aid of the work of the Virginia Day Nursery at the Waldorf-Astoria on the afternoon of February 15. The entertainment is to be known as "An Evening of Fair Children After the Old Masters." Little folk of the families of many of Mrs. Sanger's friends will pose for famous paintings. Boxes have already been taken by Mrs. J. B. Harriman, Mrs. William Church Osborn, Mrs. Clarence Blair Mitchell, Mrs. Henry Fairfield Osborn, Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. James L. Barclay, Miss Clementine Furness, Mrs. C. Ledyard Blair, Miss Adele Colgate and Miss Leahy.

THE Three Arts Club of New York City is to have a benefit performance on Tuesday afternoon, February 13, for which Mrs. Belasco has given the Republic Theatre. Among the artists who have offered their services are Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, Miss Beatrice Herford, Mr. George Arliss, Mr. Lewis Walker, Mr. Odie Skinner, Mr. Clifton Crawford, Miss Ina Claire and Miss Gertrude Brown. Mr. Joseph H. Choate will make a short address.

President Taft has consented to act as honorary patron. Other patrons are Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Courtney Walter Bennett, Consul General for Great Britain; Mr. Choate, Mr. Belasco, Major General Frederick D. Grant and General Horace Porter. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Carnegie and Mrs. August Belmont, Nicholas Murray Butler, Joseph H. Choate, W. Bayard Cutting, David H. Greer, E. Henry Harriman, Morris K. Jessup, Seth Low, Clarence H. Mackay, J. Pierpont Morgan, George C. Riggs, James Roosevelt, William D. Sloane, Whitney Warren, W. Orme Wilson, Woodrow Wilson, James Speyer and Mrs. Vanderbilt.

The proceeds from this entertainment will go toward paying off the second mortgage of $20,000 due on the present club house, which will then be self-supporting. Tickets for the entertainment may be obtained at the club and at the theatre.

AT the Charity Ball, which will be given for the benefit of the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital in February at the Waldorf-Astoria, three ballrooms will be used.

The annual performance of the Junior League will take place at the Plaza, New York, on February 7 and 8. Dancing will follow the last performance. "How the Vote Was Won," a one act play by Miss Cloely Hamilton and Mr. Christopher St. John, will serve as a curtain raiser.

In the cast will be Misses Sybil Davis, dinner for Governor and Mrs. Dix, and there is to be a dinner by Mrs. Maturin Livingston. Tuesday evening is to bring the annual ladies' dinner of the Motor Car Touring Society at the Ritz-Carlton. Other events of Tuesday are to be a musicale by Mrs. William D. Sloane and a small fancy dress dinner and dance by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carroll. The first day of next month is to bring a dance by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frelinghuysen, for the Misses Adelaide and Marian Cannon, a dance by Mrs. William H. Barnard, another of the subscription dances at the Berkeley Theatre, in aid of the work of the orthopaedic ward of the Post-Graduate Hospital, and the bazaar and vaudeville show at the Waldorf-Astoria, under the auspices of the Guild of the Looms Sanatorium, which promises to be one of the most interesting benefits of the year.

The proceeds will be added to the fund for the support of free beds in the annex. Mrs. Richard Irvin, who has arranged and will direct the benefit, will be assisted at the bazaar tables by Meses James Speyer, George W. Stotson, E. P. Huntington, Frank Potter, J. Dyneley Prince, Arthur Moulton, Joseph Frelinghuysen and Harry Combs and the Misses E. V. Cookcroft and Agnes Page-Brown. A large number of tickets have been sold. The vaudeville programme promises to be exceedingly interesting.

MOURNING has kept Mrs. George J. Gould in retirement since the opening of the season, but lately her acquaintances have noted her presence at the homes of some of her closest friends at small and informal dinners. Mr. and Mrs. James B. Clews have been giving a series of small dinners in their

Dorothy Mitchell, Lucy Dahlgren, Polly Jacob, Zoe Hamman, Noel Johnston, Cornelia Chapin and Josephine Nicolli; Meses Henry Bartel and Edward Shippen, 2d. Following the play there will be ten tableaux from the "Arabian Nights."

Among those who will pose in the living pictures are Meses Jean Morris, Eugenie Phillips, Frances Breeser, Katherine Miller, Ursula Spiller, Maud Kennedy, Elizabeth Turner, Marjory and Florence Blair, Hazel Symington, Gwendolyn Condon, Frances Henry, Helen Hunt and Elizabeth Clark; Meses Sidney D. Ripley and John Lockman.

Tickets may be obtained from Miss Josephine Nicolli, vice president, No. 23 East Thirty-ninth street, and Miss Alice Ely, No. 62 East Fifty-fifth street.

The Musical Dramatic Club will present a new opera, "King Karl of Kronstadt," by Messrs. Kenneth A. Webb and Roy D. Webb to-morrow and Wednesday evenings at the Plaza. The proceeds of the first performance will be given to the Day and Night Camps of the New York Throat, Nose and Lung Hospital, and of the second to the Warren Goddard Settlement of the Friendly Aid League and the Visitation Investigation Society. In the cast will be many well known amateurs, and some of the debutantes will sell programmes.

Reserved seats and admission tickets will be sold at the door on the evenings of the performances. Reserved seats may be purchased in advance from Mrs. Pierre C. Warpre, No. 14 East Fifty-sixth street; Mrs. Charles W. Hunt, No. 171 West Eighty-eighth street; Mrs. Lauterbach, No. 761 Fifth avenue, and Miss Maud R. Ingersoll, No. 117 East Twenty-first street.

AMONG the interesting engagements announced last week was that of Miss Annette Buckley, daughter of Mr. Richard W. Buckley, of No. 58 East Seventy-third street, to Mr. Philip G. McFadden, Miss Buckley's sister, Mrs. Jeanne G. Martin, was married to Mr. Sterling Postley last November. Mr. McFadden, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. McFadden, of Philadelphia, was graduated from Oxford in 1899. He lives at the Ritz-Carlton, and is a member of several clubs in this city and Philadelphia. The wedding will take place in April.

On account of the recent death of Mrs. Anson W. Hard, aunt of Miss Eleanor Granville Brown, there will be no reception following the ceremony at her marriage to Mr. C. Alan Hudson in the Church of the Incarnation February 7. Mr. Hudson will not give a bachelor dinner, but will give a theatre party for some of his ushers February 1.

At Governor's Island, on February 15, Miss Marion Allison, daughter of James N. Allison, U. S. A., and Mrs. Allison, will be married to Lieutenant Jacob Earl Finkel, U. S. A.

No date has been set for the wedding of Miss Marjorie W. Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Noyes, of

Earlier Engagement Prevented President Dining with Duke

Washington Believes That Otherwise He Would Have Upset Precedent and Gone to Residence of Foreign Diplomatist.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday.

WASHINGTON is so accustomed to entertaining persons of note that the presence of royalty on Thursday in the person of the Duke of Connaught did not unduly excite society, although there was great interest in the visit of the Governor General of Canada. The Duke came to pay his respects to the President, and when that had been done and he had dined with a small and select company at the British Embassy he went back to New York and joined his family for their return to Ottawa.

Mr. James Bryce, the British Ambassador, and Mrs. Bryce had already arranged a dinner party for Thursday night, so when it was announced that the Duke of Connaught would come to Washington they gained his consent to dine with them. While the social world was disappointed that the Duke found it necessary to make his visit as brief as it was informal, this feeling was nothing in comparison to the disappointment that the younger set felt in the failure of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke, to come to the capital. Princess "Pat" is a figure in modern romance that stands as clearly and dearly to the heart of the younger generation as any stage heroine or other one of fiction might ever dare hope to stand. Her reputation throughout the world—as familiar to Americans as to court circles in Europe—for high spirited independence, her pretty disregard of the determined wish of her late uncle, King Edward VII, that she should make a brilliant and royal match, and her unfailing devotion to an old ideal have all served to make her one of the most picturesque figures in court circles—that is, so far as the romance loving younger set is concerned. So when the Princess, unlike princesses in fairy stories, failed to appear at the psychological moment the younger circle was disappointed.

Postmaster General Hitchcock's dinner for the President and Mrs. Taft on the night that the Duke of Connaught dined with the Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce was the means of preventing Mr. Taft from ignoring an old unwritten law that precludes the President from becoming the guest at dinner of a foreign ambassador or minister. Had the schedule of dinners in the Cabinet circle for the President not been made and approved weeks ago it is possible that he would have set a precedent by dining at a foreign embassy and thus opened the way for diplomats to become hosts in the usual order of official entertainments in the winter. This is a problem which has been discussed many times, and an arrangement which foreign representatives have been most anxious to bring about.

Miss Helen Taft was by far the most interesting person in the White House on Tuesday night, the President and Mrs. Taft with the exception of the United States Supreme Court. On every hand one heard the question "Where is Helen?" those seeking for a glimpse of the President's daughter falling easily into the trap of affection that with any show of courtesy, to the various "young ladies of the White House." Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Miss Ethel Roosevelt were invariably referred to by the public as "Alice" and "Ethel," and now Miss Taft finds that she is simply "Helen" to the American people.

There was another dance for young men and women in the White House on Friday night, and the President and Mrs. Taft will continue their programme of dinners and dances for the younger set until the arrival of Lent.

The return to the official circle of the Attorney General and Mrs. Wickham Smith and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Oak Court—Miss H. E. Bruns, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Goldstein, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McLaughlin and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Leary.

No. 7 Park avenue, to Mr. Herbert Sierck, of this city. The engagement was announced earlier in the month.

ONE of the important weddings this week will be that of Miss Dorothy King, daughter of Mr. David H. King, Jr., to Mr. Stanley Griswold, 434 M. of Philadelphia, which will be celebrated in St. Bartholomew's Church on Saturday afternoon. Attending Miss King will be her sister, Miss Jeanne King, and the Misses Marie V. Flag, Rosina Hoyt Otis, Maud Rorland and Gladys Felt. Mr. Oran will act as Mr. King's best man. The ushers selected are Messrs. Robert D. Meacham, of Cincinnati; J. Keating Wilcox and Anthony L. Geyelin, of Philadelphia; Van Rensselaer C. Kline, Morgan E. La Montagne, Graham Roberts and Stephen Peabody, Jr., of this city. There will be a reception in the annex of the Metropolitan Club.

The marriage of Miss Jessie May Woolworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Woolworth, to Mr. James Paul Donahue, son of Mr. Patrick Donahue, of this city, will take place on Thursday afternoon, February 1, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Woolworth, No. 200 Fifth avenue. Miss Woolworth will be attended by her sisters, Mrs. Charles McCann and Mrs. Frank Hutton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Townsend and the Misses Viola and Adeline Townsend will leave for Panama and the West Indies on February 24, returning to New York on March 31.

Mrs. Thomas F. Thorne, Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne and Miss Margaret Thorne will leave New York for Europe on February 21.

Owing to mourning only relatives and intimate friends have been invited to the wedding of Miss Eleanor Hartshorn Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Peters, to Mr. Argyll Rose Parsons, on Saturday, February 2, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peters, in Garden City, L. I.

ONE of the most novel entertainments given by society for charity this season will be the Durbur Pits which will be held at the Astor on Monday evening, February 13, for the benefit of the New York Association for the Blind. The concert will be held in the association's new building, in East Fifty-ninth street, recently was laid by President Taft. As nearly as possible the life will reproduce on a small scale the brilliant procession and ceremonies held this winter at Delhi on the occasion of the Durbur.

President and Mrs. Taft have already accepted invitations and among others expected are Ambassador and Miss Jusserand, Ambassador and Mrs. James Bryce, the German Ambassador, Count Von Bernstorff, and Countess Von Bernstorff and Governor and Mrs. John A. Dix. The artists who will appear at Mr. Bagby's musical morning next Monday at the Waldorf-Astoria will be Mrs. Louise Homer, Mrs. Elena Gerhardt and Miss Katharine Godson.

SKATING BEST SPORT AT LAKEWOOD NOW

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Saturday.

WITH the snow gone, but the cold snap lasting, the ice remains and skating is the great pastime for the winter colony. The unbroken stretch of a mile and a half of glittering ice on Lake Carasallo lends itself to all manner of ice diversions, including skating, hockey and the Scotch game of curling. From the cottage colony the Tilford, Lynch, Hayden, Hatley, Jamison and Baldwin families and their guests have been on the ice.

Mrs. George Jay Gould had friends at Georgian Court over Sunday. On Sunday they visited Allaire, most of them riding. On Monday the guests, with Mr. and Mrs. Gould, went to New York and remained until Friday.

Mrs. W. G. Schaeffer gave a reception for Miss Frances Hays, of Newark, on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Hays narrated interesting stories at an entertainment given for the Endowment Fund on Thursday evening.

The Friday to Monday holiday idea is constantly growing and the business men of New York and Philadelphia are coming here in larger numbers each week. Hence they can bang golf balls or ride or drive to their hearts' content.

Mrs. Charles Lathrop Pack and Mrs. Lewis B. Stillwell were hostesses at the Country Club when Mr. John Cowper Powys, of England, lectured on "Teats." One hundred and fifty invitations had been issued. Last night Mr. Powys again lectured, his subject being "Shelley."

Mrs. Jacob Skidmore gave a luncheon at the Country Club on Thursday. Among her guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Stillwell, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Bergen, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Davis and Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Schaeffer.

Mr. C. A. Strouse, of New York, has rented Dr. Disbrow's house, in Forest avenue, for the spring.

Mr. Raymond E. Jones, of New York, and Mrs. Sally D. Jones, of No. 227 West Seventeenth street, New York, were married on Wednesday in the Catholic church here. Afterward a reception was held in the Laurel Inn-Pines.

The Lakewood Hotel will present for the entertainment of visitors a vaudeville performance on February 1. The artists will come from New York. The performance will be given in the pink ballroom.

The Lakewood Hotel had many arrivals last week and the ball on Saturday was attended by about two hundred. Preparations are under way for a masquerade ball on the night of Lincoln's Birthday. Among those recently registered at the Lakewood are Mrs. L. J. Jenner, Mrs. Alvin Zinner, Mr. E. B. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Ahuella, Mr. Paul Block, Mr. H. S. Osterwald and Mr. J. L. Trager, of New York; Mrs. F. J. Peterson, of Vienna, Austria; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard M. Bidder, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Oberst, Mrs. W. H. Joseph, Miss Leonora Crane, Mrs. William Parker and Mrs. C. A. Strouse, of New York.
